To Cover Jellies.

The best and easiest way to cover jellies is to pour melted paraffine over them when they are quite cold. This hardens at once, when a piece of brown paper may be tied over the glass to keep out the dust. The cake of paraffine may easily be lifted off with a knife, and if washed and put away can be melted over again to serve the same purpose another year. Paraffine is a clear white wax which is absolutely tasteless, and this method of treating jellies has been tried many times by the writer, who recommends it unhesitatingly. Its use was first suggested by a chemist, who once saw his wife laboriously cutting and dipping rounds of white paper and filling them in brandy for the tops of her jellies. One trial was sufficient to prove its value as a time-saver, and she did not hesitate to publish her discovery for the benefit of others.

The Pilgrim Fathers.

Here is a true list of the passengers who landed at Plymouth 274 years ago last December from the "Mayflower." WANTED—In one hundred thousand households in America, a willing, sunny daughter, who will not fret when asked to wipe the dishes, or sigh when requested to take the baby; a daughter whose chief delight it is to smooth away mother's wrinkles, and is quite as willing to lighten her father's cares as his pocket; a girl who thinks her own brother quite as fine a fellow as some other girl's brother. Constant love, high esteem, and a most honored place in the home guaranteed.

Reflect that it is only the fervent diligent soul that is prepared for all duty and all events; that it is greater toil to resist evil habits and violent passions than to sweat at the hardest bodily labor; that he who is not careful to resist and subdue small sins will insensibly fall into greater, and that thou shalt always have joy in the evening if thou hast spent the day well.—Thomas a Kempis.

Farm and Garden Notes.

A hen may be made to lay right on from the time she begins in the spring till she moults in the fall if she is fed judiciously.

In making good butter attention to the proper ripening of the cream is much more important than skill in manipulation.

When the windmill towers loom up among the buildings we find the best stock, the best barns and the best farmers. No long drives of the cattle to the river when the drought comes.

Raise cattle, horses, hogs and poultry enough to consume all the grass and roughness on the farm and that mortgage will soon be lifted. The farm will fertilize itself meanwhile.

It is said that peach yellows may be largely if not wholly avoided by the use of potash—not the meagre 100 pounds per acre, but an application of ten times that amount. Proof of this statement is offered in the fact that peach trees grown on new land are always healthy and vigorous.

The butter-maker who puts her product on the market in such a condition as not to appear as good as it is, does herself an injustice. Make the butter first class, and put it on the market in such a manner as to show for all it is worth.

An Ohio dairywoman attributes the presence of white flakes in butter to the fact that when cream gets too warm the acid formed turned little particles of milk to curd. A current of air passing over the surface of the cream also dries it and dried flakes are formed.

A Kansas fruit grower says that corn is undoubtedly by far the best crop for an orchard that can be grown, as it breaks the wind and the trees grow up straight. Insects, as a rule, will not trouble the trees when there is plenty of green fodder and corn for them to work on.

A cornell experiment station bulletin concerning raspberries and blackberries says that the only remedy for red rust is to dig up and burn at once every plant found to be affected. Cut away and burn all canes affected with anthracose pits and spray the plantation with the bordeaux mixture.

In its first stages caked udder can be quickly relieved by copious applications of hot water—as hot as the hands can stand. This is a simple thing that is well to remember. It will also pay to remember that vaseline is a first-rate application for sore teats. Sometimes the teats get badly scratched by briars and occasionally by the bars on wire fencing.

The violet does best in a moderately rich, moisture-looking loamy compost, with no rank manure within reach of the roots. The planting should be firm, done, crowding of the plants not allowed, and but little space between the lights and the plants permitted; therefore the foundation of the bed must not be of a yielding character, and for this purpose nothing is worse than manure and tree leaves.

How to Prepare Spinach.—Take a peck of spinach, cut off the roots and remove the yellow leaves. Wash until free from every particle of sand and then put the spinach into a large stewpan. Add a cupful of boiling water and a teaspoon of salt. Cover the pan and boil rapidly for twenty minutes. Drain well and mince. Add more salt and two spoonfuls of butter. Serve hot, garnished with rounds of hard-boiled eggs.
